Why Calling Company Nurse Matters in Workers' Compensation

SMCSIG encourages members to call Company Nurse immediately following a staff injury. Each member district is assigned a dedicated phone number for direct access to a nurse advisor. If you are unsure of your number, contact SMCSIG for assistance. Company Nurse connects injured employees and supervisors with registered nurses trained in occupational health. These nurses assess the injury in real time, provide clear guidance, and help determine whether self-care, first aid, or medical treatment is appropriate.

Benefits for the Injured Worker

Employees receive immediate professional support and reassurance during a stressful moment. Clear instructions and timely guidance help employees feel supported and confident in next steps, leading to faster and safer recovery.

Benefits for the Employer

Districts benefit from early documentation and consistent injury reporting. Nurse triage reports capture key details at the outset, helping reduce disputes, improve claim accuracy, and prevent minor injuries from escalating into more costly claims.

Benefits for the Doctor's Office

Medical providers receive better-prepared patients and clearer injury histories, allowing for more efficient evaluations and treatment decisions.

Calling Company Nurse supports better communication, faster recovery, and improved outcomes for employees, districts, and providers alike.
